Artist Bio

Dynamic composition and attention to detail create ultra realistic paintings that are impressive. This is but one way to describe the watercolor paintings of Russian born artist Olga Dorenko. Starting at a very young age, Olga showed great talent for drawing and painting. She entered a national art competition for Russia when she was but a young girl, not yet professionally trained, and won high honors.

After attending traditional schooling in Russia, Olga chose to attend Art School Number One in Krivoy Rog. Here, she received many top honors during her studies.

She graduated after five long years of art study into the various disciplines of art and decided to concentrate on watercolor, as it was her favorite medium. Upon graduation, she was employed by the Russian theater to paint their posters and create murals.

Because of the turmoil in her country after the breakup of the Soviet Union, Olga decided to immigrate to the United States, where she hoped to continue her career in painting. Fro the past four years, North Carolina has been her home and inspiration for her watercolor paintings. Her paintings can be found throughout the United States in collectors homes and businesses. As her passion for realism is expressed in her landscapes with such enormous clarity and depth, her popularity with those that appreciate fine art grows.

Artist Statement

From an optimistic point of view, I try to put a smile on the face of my friends and customers. I try to reflect my joy of being free to express myself through color and composition.
